The APY Board advise that, in line with the rest of South Australia, entry to the APY Lands is now open to those from Western Australia, the Northern Territory and parts of Queensland.

Anyone coming from WA or NT will still need to comply with level 3 restrictions, and submit to testing on day 1, quarantine until receiving a negative result, and submit to further testing on days 5 and 13. However, all restrictions are set to be lifted on Sunday.

SA's borders will remain closed (level 6 restrictions) with key areas of Queensland, particularly South East Queensland, including Brisbane, Moreton Bay, the Gold Coast, the Sunshine Coast, Redland, Noosa, Logan, The Lockyer Valley, Scenic Rim and Somerset.

Level 3 restrictions will apply to people arriving from Townsville and those who attended the Big Red Bash at Birdsville.

No restrictions will apply to the remainder of Queensland. Transit through Brisbane Airport is allowed.

The changes are effective immediately, meaning those in home isolation in South Australia are allowed to leave their homes if they have been in areas now under level 3 restrictions. They will still need to submit to testing on the required days.

People who have been at an identified exposure risk site must stay in isolation regardless of where they travelled from. And people who have been to a level 3 restriction zone are not allowed to visit aged care homes, hospitals unless sick, or attend Covid-controlled events with more than 1000 people.

People who arrived from Queensland before 10.45am on Thursday remain subject to the conditions under which they entered.

SA's borders, including the APY Lands, remain closed to NSW and the ACT.

APY reminds everyone to proceed with caution, as COVID-19 is still dangerous to the Anangu Tjuta.

We encourage everyone to get their vaccination when available.

Please check the APY Facebook page or the APY website for any further updates.
